WILSON & MORGAN BARREL SELECTION

Cask Strength

Caol Ila 10yo

"30th Anniversary"

We didn't want to overwhelm the fresh and muscular peat of this young Islay malt with too much wine, and that's why we chose a finish of only one year in new Pedro Ximenez hogsheads. The first olfactory impression confirms that it's not markedly winey at all: the interaction with the casks only enhanced some qualities of the spirit, resulting in a curiously contrasting match of buttery and more acidic notes, reminding of balsamic vinegar. Apart from this, it's a very medicinal whisky: peaty in a very tarry way rather than ashy. The ashier and vegetal side of the smokiness comes out only at the palate: slightly buttery here too, but overall quite grassy and dry. The finale is a long and powerful crescendo of peat smoke, quite dry and tight.
